PPMG at Hallandale is 'Old School Medicine' at its very finest

It's no secret that the healthcare that we receive today is nowhere like it was 25 years ago.

Many of us have given up trying to find a doctor like we had back in the day - when a trip to see your physician was a highlight. It was more than being ill. You understood that when you left the office, there were people who cared, calling you and even coming to your home, if necessary.

If you thought that kind of patient-doctor relationship had been put to rest, you have not visited PPMG at Hallandale. This is definitely a throw-back office to the days when the patient came first. It is one of the largest privately-run facilities in South Florida.

From staying in touch with patients and their families - to making sure that you have your medications, testing schedule and appointments, this facility is almost too good to be true.

"The way I learned from my decades of patient care, is you treat everyone like you want to be treated, never cutting corners," said Dr. David Neuman, who has served as one of South Florida's top internists for nearly 30 years. "There is nothing we will not do ensure all of our patients are pleased by the total care they are receiving."

PPMG at Hallandale has perfected health care. Whether it's at their Delray Beach office, or right here in Hallandale Beach, the objective is to make your experience a positive one - at a time when you need to rest and relax - the last thing you need is aggravation.

When it comes to primary care, the importance has been magnified throughout the years. With insurances, medicaid, medicare and being able to assist with making appointment with specialist, having someone you can count on is not only important. It is indeed vital!

Lauren Roscoe is Board Certified in Family Practice. As an advanced registered nurse practitioner, she has been around and watched it all. That's why - along with Dr. Neuman

- she has been able to bring patients the kind of health care that we have been missing.

"The rewarding thing for me, obviously, is to see all of our patients improve and get better as quickly as possible," Roscoe explained. "I believe the thing that is missing from patient care is that personal touch. Lets face it, when we are not feeling well, we want things to be easier - and that is definitely what sets us apart."

For Neuman, a second generation Holocaust survivor, his understanding of people in general has provided a great working relationship through the years. That is what helped him to open some eyes to the fact that health care didn't have to be an assembly line. It could do very well operating the way many grew up with.

EVERYTHING YOU NEED

PPMG at Hallandale's philosophy focuses on quality care, results, outcome driven and a patient-centered design. Their belief is to deliver the best preventive medicine, acute care, and chronic condition management in South Florida.

From primary care to on-site labs, flu shots, radiology, allergy testing and cosmetic procedures (Botox and Dermal Fillers) and even transportation, the total experience continues.

"It's a 24/7 deal with our patients," Roscoe said. "We have added that old school element to make them feel like they can count on us - away from the office as well."

Roscoe also deals with nutrition, which is a huge element for any patient, but certainly important to those in their 60s, 70s and 80s, who need to balance their diets to keep up with their medications.
